

The Department of Justice has concerns around AT&T and Time Warner merging. Concerns that this would allow for too much control over WHAT people watch, HOW they watch it, and HOW MUCH they are charged for it. Enough of a concern, that they are now SUING AT&T to prevent the merger.

If this is a concern then there is no way that a repeal of Net Neutrality is a good idea. Allowing ISPs to charge for access is control of information. There should be no filters to our freedom of information and the internet should not be patrolled by a business.
